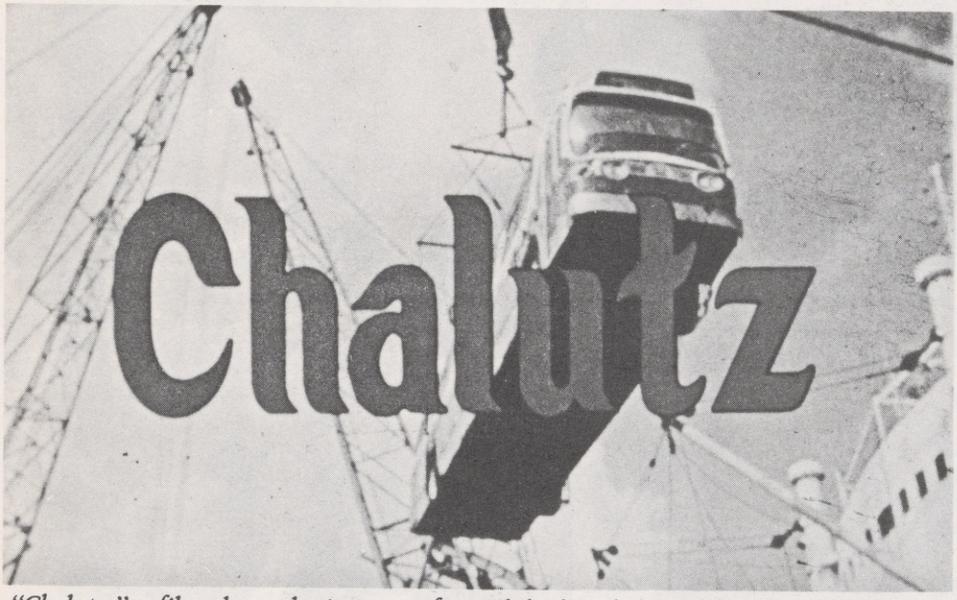
MOBILE CLINIC FILM "CHALUTZ" WINS AWARDS



"Chalutz," a film about the journey of a mobile dental clinic through Israel, recently received a major award from CINE. The film begins with the unloading of the bus by a group of dentists and dental students from the University of California, San Francisco.

A film about the journey of a mobile clinic through Israel has been honored with a major award from CINE (Council on International Non-Theatrical Events). Chalutz will also be entered in several international film festivals during the coming year.

Chalutz, meaning "pioneering spirit," is the story of a group of Americans who took the first mobile dental clinic to Israel in the summer of 1971. The project was headed by Drs. Marvin Stark, Ronald Nicholson, Kenneth Soelberg, and Robert Weis, all professors in the School of Dentistry at the University of California, San Francisco. Inspired by the success of their similar program for migrant workers in California's central valleys, the professors independently raised funds and recruited volunteers to expand the program overseas.

The film documents the journey of American dental students and faculty through Israel, from the docks of Haifa, where the bus was unloaded precariously by crane, to small settlements in rural parts of the country. Traveling in their large bus-turned-clinic, they brought dental care to many children who would not otherwise receive it.

The film is most impressive in its effort to show "Operation Chalutz" as a bridge to better understanding between people. The Americans, who represented no official organization, treated both Arab and Israeli children. They were often invited to take part in the life of the communities they visited. Sometimes the Americans shared a meal or joined a celebration; once they visited the home of an Arab sheik. The benefits of such cultural exchange, although less tangible, were as important to "Operation Chalutz" as providing dental care and education.

Dr. Stark comments, "We are delighted that Chalutz will be representing this country at international film festivals. Because the film shows Americans at work on a people to people basis, we hope it will encourage a better understanding of Americans as the kind and caring people they really are."

PROCTOR FOUNDATION: A 25th ANNIVERSARY AND A GRANT FOR STUDY OF EYE DISEASES

This month, the Francis I. Proctor Foundation celebrates its 25th Anniversary, and on September 21st, Anniversary meetings will be held, at which time distinguished foreign physicians and former research fellows of the Foundation will attend.

The Proctor Foundation also announced this month that it has been awarded an annual grant of $5,000 from Research to Prevent Blindness, Inc. (RPB) to accelerate research into blinding diseases. This grant has been awarded the Foundation every year since 1960.

The award provides unrestricted funds to be spent over the next year to advance basic and clinical eye research.

Dr. G. Richard O'Connor, Director of Proctor Foundation, said that the new grant will strengthen every aspect of the eye research program.

In making the award, Dr. Jules Stein, Chairman of RPB, said that modern technology has opened unprecedented opportunities for the conquest of cataract, glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy and other blinding diseases which will blind 500,000 Americans during the 70's unless they are controlled.

Research to Prevent Blindness, Inc. has channeled more than $19 million into eye research, providing annual grants to 46 medical institutions and aiding construction of modern eye research centers across the nation.

On September 21st, Proctor Foundation will honor Dr. Carl Mordhorst, of the State Serum Institute, Copenhagen, and Dr. Yukio Uchida, Department of Ophthalmology, Women's Medical College Tokyo. Both are former Proctor Foundation Fellows.

Some of the papers to be presented include "Studies on Trachoma in Indonesia" by Dr. Mohammed Manjoer; "Electron Microscopic Studies of the Retina," by Dr. Manfred Spitznas; and "Immunology of the Tear" by Dr. Mathea Allansmith. Other scientists participating in the Anniversary meetings are Drs. Jack Plotkin, Abdullah Isa, Isao Hoshiwara from Japan, George Bohigian, Lung-jui Yeh, and H.B. Ostler, as well as members of the faculty and staff of the Proctor Foundation.

The meetings will be held in Toland Hall beginning at 9 a.m., and will be open to any persons wishing to attend, without charge.

For further information, contact Dr. O'Connor's office, ext. 1231.
